Abstract	Louis 'Louie' J. Lamone (1918-2007) was a studio assistant, photographer, and close friend of illustrator Norman Rockwell during the last 25 years of Rockwell's life. At the beginning of his working relationship with Rockwell, Lamone was primarily charged with documenting paintings before they were shipped out to clients. During this period, he taught himself photography, and Rockwell eventually engaged Lamone to capture reference photos of models, and publicity photos for the press. This collection of 393 slides was donated to the Norman Rockwell Museum Archival Collections by Lamone and thus, were all presumably taken by Lamone himself. Identifiable exceptions are noted. The core of the collection dates from 1970-1976 and documents Rockwell at work in his studio, directing models, and selecting photographs, in addition to many candid and posed portraits inside and outside of his studio. There are many images of models posing for recognizable paintings, and many images of Rockwell alongside his models, including notable personas such as John Wayne, Arnold Palmer, Walter Brennan, George McGovern and Colonel Sanders. Nearly every painting documented in the slides are identifiable through the Norman Rockwell: A Definitive Catalogue (Laurie Norton Moffatt, Norman Rockwell Museum at Stockbridge, 1986) Other notable slides in the collection are of Rockwell with his wife, Molly, and visitors to the studio such as his son Peter, and various friends and colleagues.

Biographical Note: Louis J. Lamone

Louis 'Louie' J. Lamone was born in Pittsfield, Massachusetts to Biagio and Carmella Lombardi Lamone in 1918. He married Mary Vecellio in 1941 and they made their home in Lenox. He was a veteran of World War II, and served with the Army Corps of Engineers, mainly in New Guinea from 1942 to 1946, attaining the rank of Sergeant.

Lamone was employed by General Electric for 44 years in their distribution transformer department, retiring in 1980. In 1953, Lamone met Norman Rockwell and the artist offered him a part-time job as a studio assistant. He accepted, and carried out his responsibilities for Rockwell as he simultaneously continued to work for General Electric. He eventually became the studio's main photographer, assisting in photo shoots and documenting models, visitors, and the artist. Lamone himself was often called upon to model for Rockwell, and his likeness can be found in many illustrations which were produced during their long association.

Lamone passed away in August of 2007, and was survived by his wife and three daughters.

Biographical Note: Norman Rockwell

Norman Percevel Rockwell, son of Jarvis Waring and Anne Mary 'Nancy' Rockwell, was born on February 3, 1894 at the corner of 206 West 103rd Street in New York City. When Rockwell was nine years old, he and his family moved to the nearby suburb of Mamaroneck, New York. He was enrolled at Mamaroneck High School, but left after his sophomore year to attend at the National Academy of Design, followed by two years spent at the Art Students League.

Still in his teens, Norman Rockwell produced his first published illustrations for Fanny E. Coe's 1912 young adult book, Founders of Our Country. He continued to find success with issuers of youth literature as in "Tell Me Why" Stories and Boys' Life magazine. In 1916, Rockwell traveled to Philadelphia where he presented his work to Saturday Evening Post editor-in-chief, George Horace Lorimer. The experience was a triumph and he quickly became a regular contributor to the publication.

Steady income from the popular weekly periodical supported Rockwell's decision to wed Irene O'Connor and leave the confines of his parents' boarding house quarters. However the union would not last, and was ended by divorce in 1929. Shortly thereafter, Rockwell was introduced to Mary Barstow, a California schoolteacher, and within weeks of meeting, the couple was wed in 1930. They made their home together in New Rochelle, New York and started a family, becoming parents to three sons—Jarvis, Thomas, and Peter. In 1939, the Rockwells relocated to Arlington, Vermont, a rural community which proved to be the ideal setting for some of the artist's most enduring images of American life, including the 1943 Four Freedoms series.

The family moved again in 1953, settling in Stockbridge, Massachusetts. Six years later, heart failure unexpectedly took Mary Rockwell's life. In collaboration with his son Thomas, Rockwell published his autobiography, My Adventures as an Illustrator, in 1960.

On the advice of friend and analyst Erik Erikson, Rockwell remarried to Molly Punderson, a retired teacher, in the fall of 1961. His last cover for The Saturday Evening Post was published two years later, in 1963. Seeking a venue for more socially conscious illustrations, Rockwell began generating artwork for Look magazine in 1964, an association which continued for ten years. In 1973, Rockwell established a trust to preserve his artistic legacy by placing his works in the custodianship of the Old Corner House Stockbridge Historical Society, later to become the Norman Rockwell Museum at Stockbridge. The trust now forms the core of the Museum's permanent collections. In 1976, Rockwell became concerned about the future of his studio. He arranged to have the structure and its contents added to the trust. In 1977, Rockwell was awarded the nation's highest civilian honor, the Presidential Medal of Freedom. In his eighties, his pace slowed with the onset of cataracts and emphysema. Years of smoking his signature pipe had taken its toll, and on November 8, 1978, Rockwell passed away at home.

Scope and Contents

The Louis J. Lamone Slide Collection includes 393 color slides which primarily record Norman Rockwell in his Stockbridge studio, from 1970-1976. Most images in the collection were shot by Rockwell's long-time studio assistant, Louis Lamone. The earliest slides derive from a publicity shoot for Franklin Mint, and show Rockwell working on Bringing Home the Tree (1970). The latest images in the collection feature Rockwell working in his studio from the seat of a wheelchair (1976). These images provide valuable insight into Rockwell's late-career work process, and his social interactions with family, friends, and professional associates.

Arrangement

The Louie J. Lamone Slide Collection is arranged into forty-two series based on subject and date. Some series are restricted to the date of their subject, other series, such as Portraits of Norman Rockwell, span the dates of the collection, 1970-1976.

The original arrangement when gifted to the Museum is unknown. It was organized into thematic groupings, mostly by subject, by Norman Rockwell Museum curator Laurie Norton Moffatt in the late 1980s. Moffatt hand-wrote descriptive data on the paper slide holders, which has been recorded in the inventory. Notes in parentheses were made in graphite by the preparer of this finding aid. Most slides have date stamps from the original developer, which provided the dates for the inventory. Slides which were out of date chronologically were reorganized into date order. The main groupings identified by Moffatt were kept intact.
