Preferred Citation

The Youth's Companion Periodical Collection, Norman Rockwell Archives, Norman Rockwell Museum, Stockbridge, Massachusetts.

Background

The Youth's Companion was published from 1827 to 1929. Initially it was aimed at children, but it later expanded to become a magazine intended for the entire family. Content consisted mainly of short stories and brief articles. Many of the short stories were serials and appeared in several issues. Though the magazine moved away from its roots as a childrens' magazine, it still maintained a childrens' page and featured a great deal of content intended for younger audiences.

Scope and Contents

This collection contains many editions, both bound and unbound, of The Youth's Companion magazine that feature Rockwell covers and illustrations. The collection covers the period from July 15, 1915 to April 29 1926.
